The Energy, Creative Collaboration and Wellbeing (ECW) conferences over the last 14 years have evolved a design incorporating events of traditional Group Relations along with a somatic understanding of the body in movement (movement as being), sound and an awareness of the environment within which life unfolds, an ecological approach inviting sensuous participation.

The unifying principle of conferences is that both mind and body inform the dynamics of the here and now. ECW proposes that in the awareness of the body and its needs one becomes available to connect to the earth, its resources, and the underlying interdependence of the whole.

Today, more than ever, in a post-pandemic climate, with wars and climatic crisis, it is fundamental to rediscover the dimension of the body, the relationship with nature.

WHO IS THE CONFERENCE FOR?

This conference is for people from all walks of life, who are interested in understanding groups, organizational dynamics and systems thinking in the social contexts in which we live.

Specifically, it is for those who want to explore how to use existing resources in a more sustainable and ecological way and who would like to bring new ideas about wellbeing into their life and work.

Climate crisis is an unavoidable reality threatening the equilibrium of the globe. In all social groups and in organizations, both corporations and institutions, by activating new creative processes, it is possible to shift from a point of view based on unrealistically unlimited expansion to one based on the reality of conscious use of limited resources.

The experience of the conference will allow participants, in the roles of leader and follower, to learn and reflect upon these themes and the possibility of creative collaboration towards the realization of a common task. ECW is a work in progress and a fertile field of research in the field of Group Relations Conferences: we recommend, if you have already participated, to enroll in this eighth edition to deepen learning and develop the ability to apply it in the context of your life.

Deepening Integration Group (DIG)

There are a maximum of 4 places reserved for the DIG: this pathway deepens your understanding of the processes that develop in the GRC and develops your competence in knowing how to recognize and manage them.

The DIG is for those who have already attended at least two GRCs and who are interested in further developing this type of learning and then applying it in professional life. A specific program for the DIG is designed to combine the experience with space for reflecting on the experience.

PARTICIPANTS' FEEDBACK

It has contributed to reflect on human nature and the different behaviors people display around work and leadership... I understood better the mind body connections, which are often neglected

Anabel Navarro

The role of the body is vastly under-utilized in conferences here in the U.S. and I was so happy to be able to bring all parts of me to the conference and very much appreciated the evolution from the first ECW. The movement event at this conference was revelatory... While brief non-traditional explorations (art, movement. music etc.) can be very helpful to introduce some element of play into conferences and provide a creative entry into the unconscious, I don't think that the whole person and system is accessed as completely as was the case in ECW.

Jack Lampl

Being able to see oneself reflected in the other, feeling the critical issues and conflicts within the group they belong to and in the other groups has been a reason for growth for me.

BACKGROUND

The tradition of Group Relations Conferences, (tavinstitute.org and grouprelations.com), born from the meeting of psychoanalysis and systemic thinking, has generated extraordinary ideas and intuitions regarding unconscious collective thought processes, images, emotions, anxieties, defensive response and the impact these reactions have on a system to “stay on task”.

Our proposal is to offer a Group Relations Conference where the systemic nature of its methodology, internationally practiced for over seventy years, is developed through an integrated approach to the individual and sustainable and lively relationships with the environment. The issues of authority, leaderships, role and organization - traditionally the focus of a Group Relations Conference – will be studied within this wider angle of vision.

THE PRIMARY TASK

The twentieth century study of physics and contemporary sciences have shown “that the world appears as an interconnected web of relationships whose parts can be defined through their connection to the whole” (F. Capra, P. L. Luisi 2014); isolated parts can only exist in relation to their context. Such discovery joins the spiritual knowledge about interdependence, present in many traditions around the world, belonging to humanity and dating back centuries.

The primary task of this conference is to explore how awareness of resources, energy and creative collaboration can introduce wellbeing in their life and work.

The challenge of the work is to extend the field of attention to the unconscious as it manifests itself by observing the language of bodies in space, of energy fields, of nature, of context and patterns that connect the parts.

Interdependence and relatedness, essential for any kind of systemic thinking, is explored during the events. Learning is facilitated by accessing individual, small and large group energy and through awareness of the relationships that develop. ECW relates to social context/culture and to nature and the human place within nature. What is nature telling us, what are we telling nature and can the dialogue of human and non-human nature bring blossoming for both?

In present times of climate crisis these fundamental relationships ask for our attention; they will be a focus for the conference.

METHODOLOGY

The conference is a temporary organization shaped by the collaboration of the participants and of the staff. Residence is required: it is part of the learning as well as the observation of the web of relationships developed in the course of the conference's events. This method requires self-reflection and encourages a free spirit of action-research and thinking.

STRUCTURE

The design of the working conference includes the traditional events of Group Relations Conferences (plenary, large group, social dreaming matrix, institutional event, review and application groups) with specific events that explore the language of the arts and of the moving body in space, such as vocabulary of movement, night sounds, and dreams move.
